

Train Depots In The U.S.

In the 1850's the U.S. revolved around the railroads. Specifically because it got goods, gold, and people around the country instead of having to walk everywhere. But the railroad took up space that the whites took from the natives and the natives didn't want to give that land up to them but were basically forced too. When the whites gave treaties to the natives the natives thought it was a good trade but the documents had so many gaps and the whites took advantages. Most the trains in the 1850's were powered by steam. The first train that was powered by electricity was in the Milwaukee railroad. That's why people liked to ride the Milwaukee railroad. The railroad we drew was in West Virginia. It is still up but not running.
